

Newsletter 13 March 2011

This will be our last newsletter, we now have a Facebook page that we will be updating on a weekly basis. Find us there by searching for Bad Attitude Engines. Now we can show all of our customers and potential customers what we're doing in real time with pictures as well as words!

The new and improved website will be launching soon too! It will have many new features, the biggest one being that you will be able to "build your engine online" by selecting a base engine and choosing from a list of options it will give you a price quote for the combination you want. This will be on the new Engines page, also on that page will be some complete engines ready to go, these will have a picture of the actual engine and a list of all the parts that are in it and its horsepower rating.

The new Galleries page will have multiple galleries seperated into catagories, engines, cars, shop pics, even shop dogs.

More videos are also being added to the Bad Attitube, these will rotate into the 4 screens, each time the page is refreshed a new video will rotate into one of the screens.

Soon we will have an engine run stand for our customers who can't afford dyno time. This way we can perform initial start up, break in the cam, set ignition timing, make carb adjustments or tune the EFI system. A video of your engine being run will also be supplied as part of the package.

Lastly, alot of manufacturers and shops have disappeared over the last few years, so I can't express my THANKS enough to ALL of our LOYAL CUSTOMERS, who have kept us going during these hard economic times. Don't forget to "like" us when you visit on Facebook!
